Become a billionaire with me

The only difference between you and the person you want to become is the lack of experience and knowledge. Not saying you don't have experience and knowledge, but the version you strive to become has more. A lot of people believe it's time. They go around believing they'll make the startup in time, find their passion in time and figure out how to cook in time. But what I've realized this month is that time doesn't matter, it's what you do with it.

The core difference between you and Elon Musk is how you spend the time. Think about someone you admire. Do they have more time than you? No. They just use it better. Do they have some card that gets them access to more of the internet than you? No. At the end of the day, it's about how you use those things vs them just existing.

To be honest, I didn't value my time as much as I should've. There's this concept of a time billionaire. "When I see 20-year-olds – the thought I had was they probably have two billion seconds left. But they aren't relating to themselves as time billionaires." I wasn't acting like the time billionaire that I am and my guess is most people aren't either. This might sound strange to some people but think about it this way. The more time you spend effectively, the more money you'll (probably) make in the future. So if that's your end goal, let that be the motivation. I'm pushing myself to be super intentional about how I'm spending my time this month, focusing on the things that I either enjoy or that's an investment. Optimizing for both is ideal. But, the fundamental thing to remember is that it's not about the existence of time. It's what you do with it.

This is going to be a 2-minute update on what I've done and my plans for December. I have some exciting projects coming up so stay tuned for that!

Transitioning From Learn To Build

This month has been a lot of thinking and adjusting. For the last few years, I've been in learning mode. I've learnt about technology, philosophy, science and more. There's so much I have learned yet way more that's still available to learn. I don't want to stop learning. But, it's time to transition to build mode.

The building is all about creating change. Activating something and getting a real result. I don't want to underestimate the work it's going to take to do it and it's not for everyone. But I do think there are some people (including myself) that are stuck in learn mode with the ability to build but have no path/direction.

So over the next few months, as I get more insight on everything to do with building I'll be sharing it with the world. Follow me on medium to stay up to date on all of those :)

Medium Profile

Do we truly exist?

Philosophy Nugget

I've really been enjoying learning about philosophy and I've had some incredible discussions based on different concepts. I wrote an article going over my view on Rene Descartes philosophy "I think, therefore I am". I believe it's flawed for a few reasons but the biggest one I discuss is that to my knowledge, he never questioned whether thoughts had to belong to a thinker. I don't see a reason why thoughts just can't exist in another dimension. Give it a read and let me know what you think!

Coming Up

Action plan to becoming a time billionaire

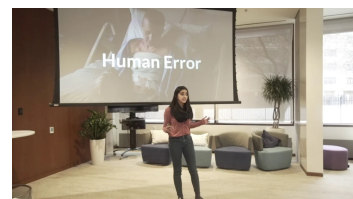

Activator @ TKS

Continuing my Olympic level training to solve the world's biggest problems.

School

Getting my high school credits to graduate with a large amount of opportunities.

Build Build Build

Creating the future of cluster headache detection, exploring the future of biomimicry and more!

This was a shorter update with more thoughts than content. But in the next month, I'm starting up my project around cluster headaches, exploring biomimicry and more. Stay tuned for the next one.

Thank you for following along my journey, I really appreciate you taking the time to read this. As always, if it's been a while definitely reach out! Would love to catch up. And with that, see you soon! ☺
